

Penn and Cornell Resume Football Classic After 2-Year Lapse Columbia Meets Brown

Quakers Have Better Team But Ithacans May Surprise

Big Red Eleven, Though Lacking Experience, Is Expected to Put Up Hard Fight to Conquer Time-Honored Rivals on Franklin Field To-Day

By Ray McCarty

One of the biggest events in the University of Pennsylvania's sporting calendar will take place on Franklin Field, Philadelphia, this afternoon, when the Cornell and Penn eleven will clash in their annual Thanksgiving Day struggle. The affair to-day has attracted more than usual interest because it will be the first post-war game between the two rivals. No games were played between these teams in 1917 and 1918.

Despite the fact that the teams are apparently unevenly matched this season, a record crowd is expected. Of course the fact that the game is the annual Cornell-Penn event is what matters, nothing else does. If a good game should result, so much the better for the occasion.

Of course the contest will be a good one—good in the sense that the teams will play hard, clean-cut football in a capable way—remains to be seen. Penn has shown ability to do so, but Cornell has not, which doesn't mean that she won't to-day.

Cornell Playing Ragged

While Cornell has shown flashes of performing in a creditable manner on occasion this fall, its play on the whole has been extremely ragged. The big Red team probably has not experienced such a disastrous season in a decade.

It must be remembered that Cornell's material is comparatively green this year and that the team has been up against some of the strongest teams in the country, so that it has had little chance to really get settled on its cleated feet. However, the Ithacans haven't entirely lost by their several defeats. The players got much good experience from those hard contests, which is apt to stand them in good stead to-day.

Cornell will enter the game knowing exactly what it is up against. The same cannot be said of Penn. The Red and Blue players, although they will be warned against overconfidence, will not be able to down entirely the feeling that the Cornell team is not quite their equal on the gridiron this season and this very feeling may prove their undoing. It will not certainly pay the Quakers to feel any more secure until the fray is ended, for this year stranger things than a Cornell victory over Penn have happened.

Must Show Improvement

In order to achieve victory, however, Cornell must show some degree of improvement and then some over the play of past weeks. Against Dartmouth and Penn State the Ithacans displayed hardly anything in the way of offense, and against the Quakers little football knowledge on the whole. Penn has many good qualities, but not the best fighting spirit by any means. In the Cornell-Penn game, Penn showed themselves to be better fighting aggregations.

If Cornell has improved within the last fortnight, in spite of all the hope she will stand a decent chance of winning this afternoon.

Rain-Soaked Gridiron Expected To Prove Handicap to Penn

Coach Folwell May Make Changes in Line-Up to Meet Weather Condition

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 26.—If Pennsylvania is not a good mud team, and the 10 to 0 defeat at the hands of Penn State and the 3-3 tie with Pitt seem to prove that it isn't, both games played on a wet field—the Quakers' eleven and the Cornell team—will have been played on a soggy field to-morrow afternoon handicapped.

An all day rain has turned Franklin Field into a conglomeration of mud and mud and mud. The weather forecast is further disheartening to the hopes of Ben Franklin's sons. It is for continued rain or snow to-morrow, with much colder temperature. A lot of people are predicting a weather change, but it is not certain. The weather conditions, and Coach Folwell did not deny it to-day at the White Horse Valley Country Club, where the Quakers spent its final day of preparation for the annual Thanksgiving classic.

Some members of the Red and Blue team are world beaters on a soggy field, but rank outsiders in the mud. This weather problem will undoubtedly have some bearing on the way Pennsylvania lines up to-morrow afternoon. Two or possibly three new faces are expected among Folwell's eleven when the Quakers trot out on the marshy gridiron.

Joe Strauss, a chunky youngster whose solid poundage gives him added ability in the mud, may break into the regular backfield combination, supplanting Ben Derr, who has been not at all certain, however, for Derr is no mean performer on a soggy field himself.

West of the backfield will remain the same as in the Penn State, Dartmouth and Pittsburgh games. Captain Bert Bell will be at quarter, "Bots" Brunner will be the punting and play halfback, and Heine Miller is a fixture at right end and Ray Miller will be the other flanker, at left end, though Bud Hopper is expected to play at left end. The younger Miller is a close fight. Hopper was Camp's all-American choice for end last year.

Joe Little and Maynard, or Titus, will be the tackles, and Carl Thomas, has right guard encoined, with a possibility that fighting Jim Neelon, Penn's best heavyweight champion boxer, may supplant Alex Wray at left guard. Wray has a firm grasp at center. The rain prevented anything except a short practice by the Penn eleven at Franklin field to-day.

Since Pennsylvania and Cornell began their annual series in 1893 the rival institutions have played twenty-five times. Twenty of these games the Quakers have been victorious in the Thanksgiving Day struggle and four times a Big Red team was returned the winner.

Over and over, one of the greatest punters and kickers of the year, has tallied thirty-two out of the thirty-four points credited to Cornell this year. This had will be closely watched by Pennsylvania to-morrow. Brunner will attempt to match Shiverick's toe and is admitted to have a tough assignment.

In striking contrast to Cornell, which will retain most of its regular players for next year, to-morrow's game will mark the last appearance in Red and Blue jerseys for virtually the entire varsity squad. Captain Bell, Heine Miller, Little, Thomas, Derr, Neelon, Titus, Light, Derr, Strauss, Lud, Wray, Alex Wray and Maynard were playing in the game for Pennsylvania. Only

Ain't It a Grand and Glorious Feelin'?

WHEN ON THANKSGIVING YOU HAVE TO WAIT UNTIL THE GROWN-UPS HAVE FINISHED BEFORE YOU CAN GET A BITE

- AND YOU WISH YOU DIDN'T HAVE COMPANY OR NOTHIN' YOU'RE SO DAWGONE STARVED

- AND YOU WAIT UNTIL TWO O'CLOCK AND STILL NO SIGN OF FOOD AND YOU REALIZE YOU AND YOUR PAL ARE SLOWLY STARVING TO DEATH

AND AT TWO THIRTY YOU AND YOUR PAL ARE JUST ABOUT TO DIE OF HUNGER IN THE LAND OF PLENTY AND YOU FEEL EMACIATED AND LIKE THE PICTURE'S YOU'VE SEEN OF STARVING ARMENIANS

AND THEN JUST AS ALL HOPE SEEMED TO HAVE GONE YOU HEAR THE SHUFFLING OF CHAIRS IN THE DINING ROOM LIKE FOLKS THROUGH DINNER

Cornell Confident: Army Eleven Works in Mud; Rutgers Gets Game With Princeton

Bases Its Hopes on Aerial Offensive

Special Correspondence

ATLANTIC CITY, Nov. 26.—Cornell received its final touches here to-day for the annual football classic with the University of Pennsylvania to-morrow on Franklin Field.

The big Red eleven, in its best form of any time this season, is confident of a good showing, if not victory, over the Red and Blue. Optimism reigns in the Ithacan camp. No one concedes defeat. The players realize that old Penn has a strong team—much better in paper than their own—and will go in with the determination to fight with the hopes of ending their season in a blaze of glory.

Coach "Speedy" Rush has a bundle of surprises in store for the Cornell team to-day. Captain Shiverick, an overseas captain during the war, has been doing all the kicking this season, but there are dark horses in the backfield who are equally as good in this department. Rush admits this fact, but only smiles when asked pointedly about the "finds."

Neither Coach Rush nor Captain Shiverick would make any predictions to-night. "We are not expecting to get kicked," declared Rush, "but we know the strength of the team we are going up against. Cornell will be better to-morrow than at any time during the season. We have had an unfortunate season and the last few games never the same for two games. This fact naturally affected our teamwork. Men were injured right along. But Cornell will fight, and the score will tell the tale."

The Ithacans were put through a drill to-day on the pier. The work-out was held in an auditorium on account of the rain. Pickets kept a sharp watch on the Cornell players. Dr. Al Sharpe, Charlie Barrett, captain of the 1915 eleven, which defeated the Red and Blue that fall, and Jimmy Xanous, captain of the 1913 team, helped in the last instructions. The grilling at the pier lasted for more than two hours. Captain Shiverick directed the team, while Barrett piloted the second drill. Every Penn player was diagnosed, and a second team initiated what may be expected from the Red and Blue.

Cornell places its hopes for a victory against Penn on a carefully prepared aerial attack. Shiverick will direct the offense, but he is not alone. The backfield holds an equal part in the attack will be mystifying in that plays will be found so camouflaged that they will be difficult to detect. Rush said that Shiverick would be the central figure.

Much attention was given to defensive formations for Shiverick's punts and kicks. It is certain that if Cornell gets anywhere near Penn's goal line, a field goal will be attempted. Cornell believes it has the advantage in the kicking department over Penn. A blackboard talk was given this afternoon.

There will be as first string substitutes in the backfield. Derr, Dodd, Evans and Wray are ball carrying backs, with George, the Army captain, and Whetton, in reserve as quarterbacks.

There is no desire to appear pessimistic, it is frankly admitted in the Army camp that the soldier eleven this year as it will face the middies is not so strong as some West Point teams in late years.

Folks here are devoid of the confident air which has been in evidence in former years on the eve of the Navy battle. Remembering that the material at the outset was the nearest that ever turned out for football here, the oldtimers are wondering how the Army youngsters will act in a big fight.

Orders were issued to-day governing the advance movement on New York, which is set for Friday morning. Fifty-five members of the Army squad will go down accompanied by the coaches, a medical officer, Trainer Tutthill and attendants, arriving at the Grand Central at 11:15. On Saturday the three battalions of cadets will leave here, arriving in New York in time for the game.

Start Work on "Bike" Track

Two hundred carpenters will start to-night building the six-day "bike" track in Madison Square Garden. The riders will practice on the new course Saturday morning. The track will be nine laps to the mile.

Blue and White Eleven Closes Season To-day

Conquerors of Dartmouth Will Oppose the Local Team at South Field

With the advent of the big Brown team from Providence to South Field this afternoon, Columbia will meet the first member of the "Big Six" in the college football world that she has played since football was reestablished on Morningside Heights in 1915. Brown comes here to-day with a formidable eleven and with a victory over Dartmouth to her credit. On the other hand the record of Blue and White contains one downfall after another. Despite these contrasting records a battle royal is anticipated by the followers of the gridiron game when the two eleven clash this afternoon.

The local football squad has met with reversal after reversal all during the season, due to the constant dropping out of the stars because of injuries. However, the coaches, Brown Dawson and Tom Thorp, have labored diligently with the material at their disposal and have produced an eleven that makes up in spirit what it may lack in ability. Because of the uncertainty concerning the condition of several of the men, the final announcement as to the eleven that will take the field against Brown has been withheld.

Eccles to Stay as Quarterback

The Blue and White line will be the same as that which faced N. Y. U. last Saturday. Jack Kennedy and Sam Weinstein will take care of the two end positions and are sure to hold their own. For a time the coaches considered changing Weinstein to quarterback, but will not do this unless Eccles, who will start at left half, is injured. Seville will be at right tackle, but Modarelli will be on the other side in place of Tower.

Lower is so bothered with a bad knee, which will keep him off the side lines. However, Modarelli is a fighter and is every bit as good as his predecessor. Ralph Forsyth and Hinch will play the guards with a strong center. This combination forms a very strong line. If the secondary defense gives the forwards any assistance at all, the Brown backs are sure to find trouble in breaking through.

Eccles will again be at quarterback, despite the reports that Quigley would be the line-up. The coaches finally decided that an injured player would be of less value to the eleven than a player of ordinary ability. Eccles has had the experience of the last two games and ought to show up much better and today's contest will be a tough one. At the closing end of a forward pass Eccles is very clever, and as this is understood to be the Columbia attack his presence will be of great value because of his ability.

Appelbaum, who came through the season at fullback, will hold down that berth. This afternoon ought to see this man at his best, which should call for a fine exhibition of line plunging. Tom Farrell, who came through the season brilliantly against N. Y. U. when called upon to fill a gap at fullback, will play left half to-day, with Moszczanski, the big Polak, at the other half.

Columbia Team Heavier

This eleven, having a small advantage in weight over the Brunonians, should make to-day's contest an interesting one from start to finish. Because of the heavy rains the field is in very poor condition, which will favor the Blue and White, because of their heavy backs and slightly heavier line. While the men are not confident of a victory, they are sure to win.

Brown squad, twenty-two strong, arrived in the city last night from Providence and went immediately to the Cumberland Hotel. Their eleven likewise is not in the best of condition, having many last minute changes. The Columbia coaches sent the men through light signal practice in the "gym" yesterday afternoon. The condition of the field, a big "pep" meeting was held by the students last night and there's much enthusiasm over the eleven.

The records of the two teams are as follows:

Columbia: 7; Vermont, 0; Columbia, 0; Williams, 3; Columbia, 0; Princeton, 0; Columbia, 0; Washington, 0; Columbia, 0; Stevens, 13; Columbia, 13; Wesleyan, 28; Columbia, 12; New York University, 27.

Brown: 27; Rhode Island State, 0.

Colgate Loses All but Four of Eleven

HAMILTON, N. Y., Nov. 26.—The Athletic Advisory Council of Colgate College met last evening, and to-day announced the following men have been awarded their letters in football: Captain West, Captain-elect Laird, Anderson, Watkins, Martin, Barton, Wooster, Cottrell, Harris, Woodman, Webster and Cornelius are the only substitutes to get letters.

In addition to Laird, only three letters will be given next year. They are Wooster, Harris and Webster. Laird is expected to fill Gillo's position next year, with Webster at left halfback, Harris and Wooster are the only ones left for the line.

Four Leading Teams Wind Up Season in Two Big Contests

Pitt vs. Penn State and W. and J. vs. West Virginia—Syracuse at Nebraska

better and the Pennsylvanians may be a slight favorite in the tussle. West Virginia has played the hardest schedule by far, nevertheless, Washington and Jefferson has the goods and will make a strong attempt to bring home the bacon from Morgantown.

Syracuse will have its second game in the West within a week and its chances are the Orange again will fall by the wayside. No Eastern team has come into the sticks and come back with a handful of scalps. The big reason is that the Easterners always take things lightly on such a junket.

Holy Cross is going out to Detroit to try its luck, which is likely to be poor. Detroit has a good team and playing on its home loat has a big advantage.

The New York Aggies eleven will try conclusions with Villanova at Ebbets Field this afternoon. Center College, the starter, will have for its rivals, at Georgetown College, of Kentucky, at St. Joseph's, of Washington Georgetown as is the prevailing impression. Here is a royal chance for famous, A. J. Brown, who would leave everybody wondering what he is hidden away in those Kentucky wilds.

Soccer Matches To-day

National Challenge Cup matches will be the chief attraction for followers of soccer this afternoon. The New York and Paterson teams, ancient rivals, will clash at Olympic Field. The schedule follows:

New York vs. Paterson, at Olympic Field, 2 p. m. vs. Tebo Tubb Basin, at Clark's Field, Newark.

Morse Dry Dock vs. Robins Dry Dock, at Morse Auld, Brooklyn.

EXHIBITION MATCH

Longfellow vs. Vikings, at Ridgewood Baseball Grounds.

Football: Columbia vs. Brown, South Field, 3 p. m. Reserved seats, $2.00.—Adm.

The "inner man" to-day! The "outer man" to-morrow—everything men and boys wear.

Closed To-day.

Erasmus Protests Team Prize Award To Flushing Racers

Erasmus Hall High School, of Brooklyn, has protested the award of the team championship to Flushing High School, in the annual Public School Athletic League cross-country race last Saturday. Erasmus contends that the failure of officials to properly check its fifth runner to finish deprived it of the honors.

The Brooklynites declare that they won the title with a total of 59 points instead of being second, with 75 points, to Flushing, which was credited with a winning total of 70 points.

Frederic H. Kruse, manager of the Erasmus team, has brought the error to the notice of Mr. Batchelor, the Erasmus delegate on the High Schools Games Committee, who will bring the matter before the latter body at its meeting this afternoon. Kruse declares that Sands, who substituted for Bradley, with the approval of Mr. Batchelor, and finished forty-first, was not checked by the officials. Instead they checked Trani, who came home in sixtieth position, as the fifth Erasmus runner over the line.

According to Kruse, the five places won by Erasmus were first, eighth, twelfth, thirteenth and twenty-first positions, for a total of 59 points, while Flushing runners scored in fourth, fifth, fifteenth, twenty-first and twenty-fourth places, for an aggregate of 70 points.

West Virginia Field in Bad Condition for Game

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Nov. 26.—West Virginia and Washington and Jefferson both worked over in the Mountaineers' armory here this afternoon. The Washington Jefferson work-out, as right as left, was a good one. The field will be in its usual condition to-morrow and eleven that gets the breaks of the game will undoubtedly win.

West Virginia will line up with Mills and Hager at ends, and Hart, Archer at tackles; Setron and Leck at guards; Bailey at center; Hite at quarter; Rodgers at fullback, and King at right halfback. The Red and Black will have Smith at fullback; Rixler at quarterback; Shields at center; Straw and Gribish at guards; Stein and Henry at tackles, and Loucks and Captain Carroll at ends.
